Scope and Content Note:

The collection covers the entire process by which the NH Commemorative Quarter was designed, selected, and minted, from 1998-2000. Included are the artists' submissions of artwork for consideration by the Governor's Coin Committee, copyright releases, final selections, correspondence, and materials related to the media launch of the selected design, the Old Man of the Mountain.

Size: 1.5 linear feet. This collection consists of 144 folders housed in 2 letter size Hollinger boxes. One sketch is housed in a separate oversized folder.

Dates: July 23, 1998-August 8, 2000

Provenance: Donated by the Governor's Commemorative Coin Committee.

History:

States Commemorative Coin Program Act was signed into law on December 1, 1997. The United States Mint's 50 State Quarters Program was a 10-year initiative that honored each of the nation's states in the order that they ratified the Constitution. Each quarter was produced for about 10 weeks and will never be produced again. Its purpose was to promote knowledge of individual states, their history and geography. During the ten-year period of the 50 State Quarters Program, the United States Mint produced approximately 34.8 billion commemorative quarters honoring the 50 states.

The New Hampshire Governor's Commemorative Coin Committee was assembled by Governor Jeanne Shaheen, and directed by Van McLeod, Commissioner of New Hampshire Department of Cultural Resources. It also included Senator Burt Cohen, Representatives David Alukonis, Terri Beyer, Phoebe Neiswenter, Gerry Williams, and Audrey Sylvester, and McLeod's secretary Louis Richard, who acted as an intermediary between the committee and outside entities.

New Hampshire was one of eight states to hold a public contest for the design of the quarter. The Coin Committee received nearly 400 entries, of which five could be sent to the U.S. Mint for final review. The five selected drawings required final editing and approval at the U.S. Mint by Philip Diehl, chairman of the Citizen's Commemorative Coin Advisory Committee (CCCAC), the Fine Arts Commission (FAC) and the Secretary of the Treasury, Lloyd Bentsen. The U.S. Mint then narrowed it down to four drawings: The Old Man of the Mountain, Covered Bridge (2 depictions), and Town/Meeting House.

The members of the NH Commemorative Coin Committee were not pleased with the Mint's choice of Covered Bridge design, nor with the changes made to the Old Man of the Mountain design. The Mint put its final choices of designs on their website for the public to see. After viewing the depictions of the bridges, several people wrote to Commissioner McLeod to express their disappointment with the choice of bridge pictures. It was widely expressed by several citizens that the bridge chosen to represent New Hampshire was actually a bridge in Pennsylvania, known as the "Day Bridge."

The Mint's depiction of the Meeting House also lacked any resemblance to the New Hampshire style of meeting houses. McLeod stated to Governor Shaheen that the Coin Committee "would be mortified" to have that design represent New Hampshire. The final issue was with the Mint's choice of putting "Live Free or Die" on the coin, the committee deemed to leave the state motto off of the coin because of its controversial nature and the division it could create. They wished to use “The Granite State” instead, but the Mint ignored their request. Commissioner McLeod further expressed to Governor Shaheen the Committee’s general disappointment, stating “of those four drawings, the Committee finds three of them totally unacceptable.”

Although McLeod and his committee were disappointed with the motto on the Old Man of the Mountain design they still chose it to represent the State of New Hampshire in the 50 States Quarter program.

Historic note: The Old Man of the Mountain was a rock formation located on top of Cannon Mountain in Franconia Notch, 1,200 feet above Profile Lake. The Old Man’s face was 40 feet tall and 25 feet wide. Geologists believe that the granite face was sculpted 12,000 years ago by the last retreating glaciers in New England. Over the last century there had been several efforts to reinforce the structure and safeguard it against erosion and cracking, but the granite finally gave way May 3, 2003, leaving the state without one of its most iconic images. In May 2011 construction started on a memorial viewing area at the foot of the mountain. Steel profilers were installed so when viewed inline with where the face once rested individuals are able to see what the cliff once looked like.

Condition of the Collection:

The overall condition of this collection is very good. There are very few issues with any of the documents. There are some creased edges on a few sketches due to the way that they were placed in the original folders.

The Committee labeled all of the drawings with sticky notes that had a letter on them that correlated to the subject and folder they belonged; they were all removed during processing, along with all staples, and paper clips. There were some documents with tape on them, where possible it was removed, but removal of all the tape would have damaged several documents.

Arrangement and Description:

This collection consists of 7 series with 145 folders, housed in 3 boxes and 1 oversized folder. The collection was donated in one large storage box, containing a stack of folders with several loose documents mixed in. The folders that contained the artists’ drawings were labeled by subject; these subject headings were retained as subseries within the first series.

The series for the collection have been arranged according to subject matter and content. The content falls into seven areas: sketches, copyright releases, final submissions, committee correspondence, quarter launches, press releases and oversized documents. Within the series, the items have been placed in alphabetical order.
